

Show/Hide User (Username) From Welcome Screen on Windows XP & Vista

Many a time you have multiple users created on your Windows XP or Vista for various purpose for e.g their will be user which will be used for running batch scripts and another account for remote desktop. Out of these users some may not require to login via Welcome login screen. Hence keeping those user names on Welcome screen seems useless.

You can hide such username from welcome screen via User Account settings from control panel but that will be tedious task. Here is small utility User Control with which you can instantly hide-show username from welcome login screen of Windows Vista & XP.

User Control freeware utility & enables you to remove username from the Welcome Screen, while still maintaining the user account.

Screenshot of User Control 2.0.0

Download User Control 2.0.0 and instantly Hide/Un-hide username from welcome screen.

Check out How to Change Logon Background Screen on Windows XP & Vista

Source: <http://www.blogsdna.com>